Three New Buildings Contemplated in Proposed School Expansion Program Which Hinges on Success of Bond Issue At August Primary

Three new buildings—a centralized senior high school in the downtown district, a junior high school in the East End and a modern elementary school in suburban Glenmoor—are contemplated by the board of education in the proposed $700,000 school building program, the materialization of which hinges upon the successful outcome of the $385,000 bond issue at the Aug. 13 primary.

The proposed new senior high school, principal item in the expansion program, will consist of 40 classrooms, an auditorium seating 2,000 persons and a gymnasium of similar capacity, board members explained today in outlining their plans.

Facilities For 1,200
The building will afford up-to-date educational facilities for 1,200 students in the three highest classes of the public school system. Supt. H. G. Means estimated today that there will be approximately 1,000 sophomores, juniors and seniors here during the coming school year.

The proposed auditorium would be the largest in the city, exceeding by more than 200 the seating capacity of the Ceramic theater. Such an auditorium, it was pointed out, would be an inducement for conventions and public meetings which demand spacious quarters.

The 2,000 seats proposed for the gymnasium, additional to those in the auditorium, would provide ample capacity for basketball crowds, which are necessarily limited in the present structure.

14-Room Building in East End
East End would be provided with a junior high school of 14 classrooms accommodating about 470 pupils, an auditorium seating 650 and a gymnasium of similar capacity. Enrollment in the freshman class and the seventh and eighth grades in East End this fall is expected to be 410.

Plans call for the erection of a five or six-room building in Glenmoor to replace the present portable schools. The enrollment there was 170 last school year.

The board has reached no definite decision on sites, although the land on which the present buildings stand probably will be chosen in Glenmoor, and the school board property, the former Thompson farm in Pennsylvania avenue, Oakland, is expected to be the site for the East End school.

Two Locations Considered
At least two locations are now under consideration for the proposed centralized senior high school. A selection will be made known, the board has promised, before the balloting date.

In the event the building program is endorsed, the present high school structure, occupied in 1914, would be converted into a junior high school. Based on estimated figures for the next term, attendance at the downtown junior high school would be 1,000.

Even though the school reorganization plan is victorious, it will be necessary to continue utilization of a part of Central school for classroom purposes, it was pointed out.

ABSENCE OF RECORDS HANDICAPS INQUIRY

Utility Lobby Investigators Find More Blank Files

By The Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 30.—Members of the senate lobby committee said today that the same absence of records they have encountered in their inquiry into the Associated Gas and Electric system has been found in many of the other large utility companies. The expenditure by the power companies of more than $1,000,000 to defeat the Roosevelt holding company bill has been announced, senators said committee investigators found the files of the companies virtually blank with reference to the campaign.

They expressed confidence, however, that they would continue to make headway with the inquiry from the mass of "tips" which they said were pouring in from voluntary sources.

They went ahead today questioning officials of the Associated Gas and Electric system, still waiting for H. C. Hopson to turn over the files of the company.

Describing Hopson as the brains of the A. G. E. organization, investigators have been looking for him for 10 days.

At the same time the senators were attempting to establish responsibility for the destruction of A. G. E.'s records with regard to its campaign against the holding company bill—a campaign in which the company said it spent $7,000,000.

GENEVA, July 30.—The League of Nations confronted obstacles today in its apparent program of speaking softly and moving gently in the impasse between Italy and Ethiopia.

League circles said England appeared to be the only member of the council likely to call for forceful action at a momentous session tomorrow.

Report from Scandinavian states, however, indicated that those nations were following keenly the league's handling of the dispute and were insistent that it should protect the interests of smaller nations.

Eden England's Spokesman
Any persistent temporizing in the East African problem, Geneva sources said, might lead to difficulties at the September session of the league assembly and possibly even to threats of new resignations.

England's stand for the special council session aroused widespread interest. Anthony Eden, British minister for League of Nations affairs, is popularly cast in the role of "leading man."

London reports said Eden would demand a pledge of sincerity from Premier Benito Mussolini that Italy explore every possibility of East African peace, and would insist otherwise on full dress debate of the whole controversy.

Duce Wants Debate Limited
(Italian officials, dispatching more troops to East Africa, said Italy would raise no obstacles to the league if the council adhered to its contention that the case should be returned to the commission for discussion of frontier incidents.)

Ethiopian representatives said Emperor Haile Selassie expected the council to decide between the contentions of Ethiopia and Italy. Ethiopia demands that the commission investigate the entire dispute; Italy asks that it be limited to frontier incidents.

Outbreak Against Italy By Natives Confirmed
ADDIS ABABA, July 30.—Authoritative Ethiopian sources said they received confirmation today of reports of a revolt of a number of native Somalis in Italian Somaliland.

A party of Italians meanwhile departed from Addis Ababa. Complete details of the uprising were lacking.

Previous reports, however, said the natives in Italy's colony of Italian Somaliland, southeast of this "last black empire," had struck out for Ethiopia in the vicinity of Ualual, scene of a frontier incident.

Secrecy Shrouds Movements
Ethiopian troops, 100,000 strong and modernly equipped marched away from the capital today under the command of former cabinet Minister Dedjazmach Haptmekael.

Strict military secrecy surrounded the troop movements. The office declined to confirm reports that the field army from southern Ethiopia was headed for the frontier of Eritrea, Italian colony to the northeast.

The field army set out for its undisclosed destination after marching from its quarters at Gamu into the capital yesterday in the first evidence of large-scale military movements in the empire.

The soldiers of Emperor Haile Selassie, clad in khaki uniforms and bearing new rifles, aroused the populace to fervent demonstrations.

Women Aid In Work
Commander Haptmekael's wife, a member of Ethiopia's highest nobility, volunteered to join the army. Authoritative sources believed the emperor was considering seriously her offer.

Other women leaders adopted her course, entering especially in recruiting work. One woman said in an address to a throng in the public square:

"The Italians accuse us of being savages, which is a fact, inasmuch as we are the savages of a family of lions." (Emperor Haile Selassie is known as "the Conquering Lion of Judah.")

LEGION TO VOTE FOR BOND ISSUE

Veterans Indorse Proposed School Expansion Program in City

East Liverpool post No. 4, American Legion, at a meeting Monday night indorsed the proposed $385,000 bond issue for a $700,000 PWA school building program, which will be submitted to the voters at the Aug. 13 primary election here.

The veterans pledged their support of the plan to provide 55 percent of the cost, after Dr. Collin F. Kinsey, member of the board of education, explained the program includes erection of centralized senior high school in the downtown zone, a junior high school in East End, and an elementary building in Glenmoor.

The Legionnaires several months ago went on record in favor of a junior high school in East End. Representatives of the board of education are expected to speak at an East End Citizens' league meeting in the Hill building, Mulberry street, at 7:30 tonight.

School Superintendent H. G. Means said the program will be outlined at meetings of labor unions, women's clubs, parent-teacher associations and other civic groups during the next two weeks.

The bond proposal also will be discussed tonight at 7:30 at a meeting of Local Union No. 124, Liners, Gliders, Decalcomania Workers and Decorating Kiln Firemen, to be held in the Potters' hall.

The board of education is expected to select a site for the downtown high school at a session Friday night. The old Knowles, Taylor & Knowles pottery tracts in Walnut and Bradshaw avenue owned by W. H. Vorey, and the site of the old plant of the Hall China Co., East Fourth, Walnut and College streets, have been suggested.

By The Associated Press.
BIG BAY, Mich., July 30.—Henry Ford was 72 years old today. The founder of one of the world's greatest industrial empires observed the birthday anniversary at his "cottage," a 16-room affair, in the Huron Mountain club grounds on the shore of Lake Superior.

As usual on his birthdays, Ford denied himself to interviewers and planned no ceremony of any kind. The absence of telephone or telegraph wires at the Ford place enabled him to enjoy the seclusion he invariably seeks on his vacation jaunts.

COUNCIL PLANS TO SPEED WORK ON ROUTE 30

Session Called for Tonight To Enact Legislation On Street Widening

WAIVERS TO BE ASKED

Highway Department to Let Contract in August for Lincoln Way Project

City council, in a special session at 8 tonight in the municipal building, is expected to enact final legislation for the widening and resurfacing of U. S. route 30, known as the Lincoln highway, along Market and Third streets from Fourth street to the Chester bridge.

Two ordinances, one providing for the city to assume responsibility for damage claims and another authorizing the state highway department to proceed with the improvement, to be financed with federal funds, will be introduced.

Plans are Accepted
Previously the lawmakers accepted the plans and specifications for the project which will cost about $78,000, according to state highway department estimates.

Councilmen indicated legislative speed is planned in order to expedite signing of waivers by property owners. Members of the roads and streets committee of the Chamber of Commerce, who appealed to the state highway department several months ago for allocation of federal funds for the project, have promised to cooperate with city officials in seeking the consent of the property owners.

Waivers have been prepared, and it was said steps will be taken to obtain signatures as soon as council enacts the legislation and Mayor O. Earl Greenwald approves it.

To Let Contract in August
State highway department representatives announced it was planned to include the project in the August contract letting. If all legislation has been enacted.

Barring unforeseen delays, the work, which will provide employment for 50 or 75 men for two months, will be started early in September.

Later, good roads boosters said, the state highway department will be asked to improve the northern end of U. S. route 30 from Fourth street to Ninth street.

Councilmen said a request by John Orr, representing the Orr estate property in Green lane, for permission to erect a retaining wall, will also be considered tonight. The request, filed a week ago, has been investigated by a councilmanic committee.

MELVIN BARCLAY, 21, EVANGELIST, DROWNS

County Man Seized With Cramps While Swimming

Melvin Barclay, 21, of Columbiana village, a lay evangelist, was drowned Monday at 7 p. m. when seized with cramps while swimming in a 22-foot hole in Yellow creek, near Hammondville.

Barclay, who had just concluded a two-week revival campaign at the Nazarene church in Stratton, lost his life a short time after he plunged into the water.

Other bathers attempted to rescue him when he called for help, but were unable to reach him before he sank. His body was recovered an hour and a half later.

Firemen from Wellsville and Toronto, who responded to an alarm by lumbago, were unable to resuscitate him. The body was taken to a Toronto funeral home.

Barclay leaves his parents and several brothers and sisters in Columbiana. He has been preaching in district churches for several years.

Subordinate Nazi Officials Persist In Anti-Semitic Drive

13 Arrested as Drive Goes on Despite Orders from Superiors to Put Brake on Ultra-Radical Activities

By The Associated Press.
BERLIN, July 30.—Seven Jews and six Gentile women were arrested in Halle today for alleged "violation of racial principles," indicating that, despite attempts from above to curb anti-Semitic activity, it still continues in Germany.

One of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's troubles for the moment, seems to be getting his petty officials to observe discipline. It became apparent that local burgomasters and police officials often take steps which exceed their competence.

Thus, the burgomaster of Nurnberg decreed that only the swastika shall be displayed on public buildings, although the reich recognizes both the swastika and the black white and red flag of imperial days as the official colors of Germany.

Similarly, the burgomaster of Quedlinburg decreed that Jews may not enter local museums or cathedrals. As this ban is directed against all Jews, even those of foreign nationality, the decree flies in the face of federal orders to treat foreigners courteously.

Cardinal Bertram issued orders to the churches in his diocese to have the following prayer said after each mass: "Let us pray for the peace and freedom of our whole church, especially within our fatherland."

Check Draconic Measures
The Nazis put out a police communique from Recklinghausen, which said that 10 lay brothers of the congregation of "The Brothers of Mercy" had been arrested at "Maria Lindhof," a home for feeble minded and epileptic boys, on charges of immoral practices. The communique intimated that four additional institutions of that congregation will be similarly charged with immoral practices.

However, there was a general feeling that an obvious effort was being made by high authorities of

NEW TAX BILL WINS APPROVAL OF COMMITTEE

Chairman of House Group Hopes to Get Measure on Floor Wednesday

QUICK PASSAGE SEEN

Democrats Line up Solidly Behind Roosevelt Wealth-Distribution Plan

By The Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 30.—The new $275,000 tax bill was formally approved today by the house ways and means committee.

Chairman Doughton (D) of North Carolina hoped to get the measure up on the floor tomorrow. He said that if he failed it would be taken up "Thursday at the latest."

Hopes To Pass Bill By Saturday
"I hope we can get it passed by Saturday," Doughton added. "If we don't, we certainly can get it through by Monday."

The bill includes recommendations outlined by President Roosevelt in his message to congress June 13 advocating a "wider distribution of wealth."

It embodies new taxes on inheritances and gifts, in addition to those already levied on estates and gifts; increased taxes on individual incomes and corporation excess profits and graduates levies on corporation net incomes.

Indications were that Republican members of the ways and means committee would file a minority report criticizing the bill because of the contention it would do nothing worth while toward balancing the budget.

Although less than a dozen committeemen were present when the vote was taken, all but one of the absentees made it known that they would vote for the bill.

The only member not recorded was Rep. Lammack (D.) of Ohio, who is ill.

Deduction Plea Unheeded
There had been forecasts that an attempt would be made in the committee to permit corporations to deduct from their taxable income gifts made to charitable, educational and other organizations not operated for profit. This did not materialize.

Today's committee session lasted less than 15 minutes. Committee Democrats, however, already had spent about two weeks working on the bill in secret sessions from which the Republicans were excluded.

As the bill was reported, Rep. Scrugham (D.) of Nevada made a scathing amendment which he will propose from the floor to deduct from corporation income money derived from the mining of gold.

In the senate, Democrats also were arranging to speed the measure. Chairman Harrison (D.) of Missouri called the senate finance committee today to start hearings.

AUTO DEALERS HOLD OUTING WEDNESDAY

400 Expected for Picnic at Oakdale Gardens

More than 400 executives, salesmen and mechanics are expected to attend the third annual picnic of the Automobile Dealers' association of Columbiana and Carroll counties, which will be held at Oakdale gardens on state route No. 14, near Pine Lake, 15 miles north of here, Wednesday afternoon and night.

All salesrooms, garages and repair shops here and in other Columbiana and Carroll county towns will be closed at noon to permit employees to attend the outing, President K. Trotter of East Liverpool, president of the association, announced.

About 50 affiliated dealers will be represented at the picnic, including 10 or 12 agencies here. More than 100 will go from East Liverpool.

Refreshments will be served and an athletic and sports program has been arranged. The diversion will include softball, horseshoes, boxing and boating.

Arrangements are in charge of President Trotter, assisted by Vincent McGeehan and Robert McKelvey of East Liverpool, Riley Runyon of Wellsville, C. O. Hawk of Lisbon, J. W. W. of Salem, Herman of Columbiana and Harry Myers of Kensington.

Tickets for the outing are on sale here at the Litten and Victory Motor Sales companies.

Last year's picnic was held at Fredericktown, when several hundred persons attended.

CLEVELAND, July 30.—Two boys and their mother lost their lives early today when fire destroyed their rooms on the second floor of an apartment building here.

Columbiana County relief administration officials expect advice Wednesday regarding Washington action on works progress projects which had been sought under the new program which will become operative in August.

Associated Press dispatches a few days ago said that it was estimated 310 men would be given jobs under the new setup which will pave the way for the withdrawal of federal funds for direct relief about Sept. 1.

William Ovington of Lisbon, Works division manager, said no instructions had been received up to noon today, but everything was in readiness to speed projects.
Congressman L. E. Imhoff advised Mrs. Dale Kessell, postmaster, that the stadium project at Nicholson field, Wellsville, has been approved. This will head the PWA projects in the county.

East Liverpool has asked allocations for continuance of sidewalk construction and also grants for street grading and extension of water mains in Gardendale.
About $200,000 is said to be represented by program outlined by the county officials.

The bill now goes to President Roosevelt.
It was sponsored in the house by Rep. Robert T. Secrest (D) of Ohio and in the senate by Sen. Robert J. Bulkley (D) of Ohio.

Eckelberry presented a proposed schedule of wages for drivers of school board-owned buses and remuneration for contract haulers. He said it was about 10 percent higher than the present schedules approved by the state department of education for state-aid districts. The drivers' schedule ranged from $30 a month to $48 and the contract schedule was $75 per pupil a month and $1 per mile of a route a month over hard surfaced roads, with a 2-cent 2 percent on mileage allowance added for dirt roads.

WOMAN CONFESSES SLAYING CHICAGOAN

Former Dancer Admits She Killed Ervin Lang

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 30.—Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty today said Mrs. Evelyn Smith, former burlesque dancer, confessed early this morning that she alone killed Ervin Lang, cut off his legs with the aid of her Chinese husband, Harry Jung, threw his body into a swamp near Hammond, Ind., the morning of July 6. Dougherty said he and Lieut. Thomas Kelly of the state's attorney's office secured the admission in his office after eight hours of questioning during which Mrs. Smith was twice confronted by Mrs. Blanche Dunkel, mother-in-law of the slain man, and alleged instigator of the slaying.

Mrs. Smith at first denied Mrs. Dunkel's purported story that she had hired the former to kill Lang for a fee of $500 of which $100 was paid.

The assistant state's attorney said the alleged confession corroborated almost completely the story he said Mrs. Dunkel told after her arrest July 10 when she was alleged to have admitted hiring Mrs. Smith to slay her son-in-law because of jealousy of Lang's attentions to other women since the death of Mrs. Dunkel's daughter, Mallie, in 1934.

Indiana avenue, between Fifth and Sixth streets, and Sixth street between Carolina avenue and Indiana avenue were recently paved and graded as FERA projects. Indiana avenue, between Third and Fourth streets, was graded and preparations were made to apply the surfacing when works relief projects were halted about three weeks ago.

No steps have been taken to improve the block between Fourth and Fifth streets, however.

U. S. AUTHORIZES HEALTH SURVEY

$3,450,000 of Works Funds
Set Aside for Canvass on Chronic Diseases

WASHINGTON, July 30.—President Roosevelt today allotted $3,450,000 of work relief funds to the public health service for a survey of chronic diseases.

Surgeon Gen. Hugh S. Cummings estimated that the three-fold study would give a year's employment to 3,500 white collar people now on relief rolls. His statement said it would include:

1. A house to house canvass in selected urban and rural communities to determine the prevalence of long-standing illnesses among the rich, the poor, and middle class families.

2. Physical examinations in a smaller number of instances to check the accuracy of the canvass reports.

3. A survey of medical facilities, particularly for chronic diseases.

At the same time, Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator, announced that adult education classes—designed to provide work for needy teachers as well as an opportunity for self-improvement of grownups—would be continued under the work relief program.

Twelve hundred teachers are to attend summer schools in preparation for classes to be resumed in the fall. And Hopkins estimated that 2,000,000 adults—not necessarily from relief rolls—would take advantage of the academic and vocational training.

The proposed expenditures for the health survey by states include $338,000 for Ohio.

SIDEWALK WORK TO BE RESUMED AT WELLSVILLE

Service Director Imbrie Awaiting Instructions To Assign Men

JOBS ARE UNFINISHED

Allocation of Federal Aid For Street Programs Expected Aug. 1

Service-Safety Director George B. Imbrie prepared today for the resumption of WPA sidewalk construction in Wellsville, in anticipation of allocation of federal funds for the August program.

With several projects unfinished, because of "stop" orders issued two weeks ago, Wellsville officials said it was a foregone conclusion that an additional grant would be authorized to enable completion of the work before fall.

Imbrie, with the approval of the Columbiana county relief administration, has also asked funds for the improvement of the Riverside, Chester and Maple avenues, repairs to the Central fire station and erection of a shelter house at Hammond park, Wellsville-Salineville road. The cost of the latter project is estimated at $31,988.51.

For two weeks, the service department has been marking time on federal relief work and proceeding with minor repair jobs.

PROFIT TAKING UNSETTLES LIST

Activity Pronounced at Outset But Pace Slackens in Later Transactions

By The Associated Press. NEW YORK, July 30.—Rather heavy profit taking unsettled the stock market today after the list had opened with a relatively steady undertone.

The activity was quite pronounced at the start, blocks of several thousand shares changing hands. The ticker tape dropped a minute behind floor transactions. The pace slowed down later and a number of the losers were accorded support.

Issues off fractions to around 2 points included American Can, American Telephone, Westinghouse, U. S. Steel, Case, Western Union, General Motors and Columbian Carbon. The rails were resistant and improvement was shown by Southern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Union Carbide, Celanese, Industrial Rayon and Studebaker. Call money renewed at 1/4 of 1 percent.

Cross-currents of industrial and political news indicated no marked change in drift, brokers said. Encouragement was derived from the latest batch of quarterly earnings reports of mercantile and industrial companies, the majority of which showed improvement.

On the other hand Wall Street compilations of income for class I railroads tended to inspire caution. Statements issued thus far for June showed that these roads failed to cover fixed charges in that month by approximately $3,400,000 and that their aggregate net loss for the first six months was about $60,000,000, compared with a deficit of $24,853,000 in the like period of last year.

Wall Street studied closely the June sales of chain store systems reporting to the federal reserve agent at New York. The total, which was about 2 1/2 percent under a year ago, contrasted with a slight gain in the business of wholesale concerns.

In the foreign exchange market the pound sterling opened down 3/4 of a cent at $4.95 3/4. The guilders were off .08 of a cent at 67.77 cents. The French franc was .0014 of a cent lower at 6.61 cents.

PACKERS JOIN DRIVE ON PROCESSING TAX

Meat Firms File Suits to Bar Collection of Levy on Pork

By The Associated Press. CHICAGO, July 30.—Seventeen meat packing companies today were aligned with many of the nation's leading flour producers against federal processing taxes, collected under the agricultural adjustment act.

The packing firms yesterday began suit in United States district court against the validity of processing taxes on pork. Today they planned to ask temporary injunctions against government collection of the levy until the validity of the act was decided by the courts.

Suits against flour processing taxes, primarily based upon the same arguments of constitutionality have been filed in many district courts during recent months. In several cases injunctions have been granted.

Extended To Sept. 15

Maintenance of peaceful working conditions in the soft coal industry has been made to seem dependent on passage of the Guffey-Snyder bill. Friends of that controversial measure have performed a skillful maneuver.

John L. Lewis, president of United Mine Workers, has complied with President Roosevelt's request for a continuation of the truce which his organization has maintained in the soft coal industry. Mr. Lewis, it is fair to suppose, is pleased with the opportunity to trade a few more weeks of peace for the chance of getting the Guffey-Snyder bill.

It is the bill whose enactment has been urged by the administration against whatever reasonable doubts congressmen may have in regard to its constitutionality. The threat of a coal strike is a heavy club to hold over congress. Few congressmen are able to see how they can keep it from falling unless United Mine Workers can be persuaded to take it away.

The Guffey-Snyder bill, according to Mr. Lewis is the only formula offered from any source to cure the industry's ills. His assumption that those ills are curable is debatable. More debatable yet is his assumption that the Guffey-Snyder bill, a miniature recovery act and Wagner labor disputes bill combined, would be an effective remedy. Yet, because no other remedy has been offered, it has been made a question of using a questionable remedy or of making it necessary for Mr. Lewis to carry out his threat of a strike. Sometime before Sept. 15, when the latest extension of the truce expires, congress must get out of its dilemma on this vital question.

Rotten To The Core

Perhaps refusal to give opposition the benefit of a doubt is an essential policy in crusading. Otherwise, the crusader might turn soft and start pulling his punches in deference to a foe who really wasn't such a complete villain after all.

President Roosevelt has made it known there will be no silly sentimentality between himself and corporations giving gifts to private charity. Let softies talk about permitting deductions up to 5 percent of net income of charitable contributions, but he will have none of it. Apparently, administration leaders in congress are ready to echo his refusal.

Mr. Roosevelt says corporations contribute to charity to build goodwill. What kind of a crusader would he be if he let the heathen build up goodwill right under his nose? No sir, he would rather not touch their tainted money at all.

Unfortunately, private charities, intensely interested right now in the federal government's muddled attempt to give back to them some of the burden of relief it accepted so blithely once upon a time, can't see it that way. It's hard for them to believe all corporations are rotten to the core, mainly because corporate gifts have recently provided about a fourth of all funds raised in the United States for community chests. They've an idea that exempting charitable gifts from federal taxation might encourage even more generous giving—a sharing of wealth without tax collectors and politicians as intermediaries. But they aren't crusaders, at least not of Mr. Roosevelt's enmity. It would be an admission of weakness for him to let a corporation give anything away before government had a chance to confiscate it.

Unmentionables

Italy plainly does not intend to let Ethiopia choose the subjects for conversation in the forthcoming meeting of the League of Nations council at Geneva. Premier Mussolini knows Emperor Haile Selassie would like to talk about boundary lines, for instance, and boundary lines is one of the conversational unmentionables right now.

Actually, the whole dispute between Italy and Ethiopia, however complex it may seem, turns factually on the exact location of the boundary between Italian Somaliland and Ethiopia, where Italian colonial soldiers and Ethiopian soldiers engaged in battle last December. Italy claims Ethiopia was trespassing; Ethiopia claims Italy was trespassing. It happens that a map published in 1928 "under the auspices" of the Italian ministry of colonies shows the incident occurred in Ethiopian territory.

It would be foolishly naive to believe Italy would take a different attitude toward Ethiopia if the "incident" which has caused it to concentrate troops in Italian Somaliland were to be denounced as unworthy by the League of Nations, yet Premier Mussolini is naturally anxious to keep everything as regular as possible. So far, Italy has been able to get its way with the League of Nations and there is no reason to believe Ethiopia will be able to upset the diplomatic preparation for its invasion any better than it promises to upset the military preparations. Nothing is impossible, but firm and resolute action by the League of Nations, favoring neither one side or the other, is so close to impossible that no one expects it to happen.

International Crime Preserve

Announcement that the United States will deport alien convicts for economy purposes is a reminder that no fatted calves will be killed for the errant prodigals when they are shipped home. They will be, in fact, as unpopular in their native lands as they are in the land they have adopted.

What the world needs most, next to a sound 5 percent investment, is an international crime preserve where all nations could send undesirable aliens. Something about the size of the island of Madagascar would be excellent.

The preserve could be established out of an international fund, and once established it would be made to support itself. For instance, the first 2,000 crooks set ashore would be told they could do one of two things—escape or figure out a way to maintain themselves. Of course, they would escape as rapidly as they could hire accommodations and before long they would be back in their old haunts again, robbing, peddling drugs and performing an occasional murder. By the way, that's probably what is going to happen to most of the alien convicts the United States is preparing to deport. Having lived in the land of opportunity, it's unthinkable they would stay away from it any longer than necessary. It will be nice, though, to be let out of jail, taken by a boat ride and treated like persons of importance.

In Good Standing

Whatever may be Emperor Haile Selassie's shortcomings as a war lord, he seems able to hold up his end in any altercation with diplomats. He knows his rights and he stands on them.

Ethiopia is a member of the League of Nations, in good standing. It joined the League because it hoped to secure certain advantages in the conduct of its international affairs.

The time has come for the League to prove whether it took in a member under false pretenses. Emperor Haile doesn't seem backward about asking for a showdown. He has demanded convocation of the League of Nations council.

It is obvious to everybody, including the emperor, that the organization at Geneva is in a corner—a tighter corner by far than the one it was crowded into when Japan invaded Manchuria. A critical test of the League's power to act is being made.

That power is composed of the individual governments within the League, Italy, France and Great Britain primarily. Since they also are the governments which have been eyeing Ethiopia for many decades, it seems inevitable that Ethiopia is going to get a raw deal. Emperor Haile apparently has no intention of keeping his mouth closed to avoid embarrassment for the prominent brethren in the Geneva fraternity.

Talk Is Free

When Rep. Dickstein of New York had concluded a diatribe against Adolf Hitler during a session of the house last week, Rep. Patman of Texas leaped to his feet and demanded that the United States "mind its own business."

There are some puzzling implications in that demand whenever it is made. What did Rep. Patman really mean?

Certainly, he did not mean that Rep. Dickstein has no right to criticize Adolf Hitler because he is a congressman and Hitler is the chancellor of Germany.

Certainly he did not mean, either, that because Rep. Dickstein was criticizing Chancellor Hitler the United States was taking an official stand against the Nazi leader. Rep. Patman probably meant that since there was nothing the United States or Rep. Dickstein could do about Germany the wisest course would be to keep still. In a way, that's pretty reasonable advice, but hasn't Rep. Patman, himself, spurned it on a good many occasions? If he hasn't, he is one of a very few congressmen willing to keep still when there is a chance to make a speech in behalf of a worthy cause.

Home And Happy

Helen Willis Moody, giving the press a chance to adorn its columns, posed for the cameramen and talked for the reporters on her way home from an exciting English tennis triumph. Mrs. Moody said she was very happy, that her victory over Helen Jacobs was the greatest pleasure of her life, that she was overjoyed at her comeback as the foremost woman tennis player in the world.

Mrs. Moody said—oh, she said a great many things. Somehow, what she said doesn't seem important. The cameramen took the edge off the interview with their excellent work. Mrs. Moody is news because she is a headliner in sports. When one thinks of Jim Braddock, Babe Ruth, Jim Lonsdale—oh excellent persons—whose photographs adorn sports stories, it's easy to wish Mrs. Moody would go away and come home often, for the cameramen's sake.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By

O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK, July 30.—New York notables are not always to be seen in the flashy or exclusive restaurants. There are, of course, the opulent strikers who fill much space in the social chit-chat columns and are classed as "safe society." They are always in the tony spots.

But almost every celebrity has his private haunt, usually some plain and neat kitchened place off the traveled trails where the proprietor may do the cooking and his wife the serving. Where the service is leisurely but instincts for cuisine strong.

The Paul Whitmans are frequently diners at Schrafft's. Also Amelia Earhart, Earl Carroll favors a Chinese place, Chow Mein. Mrs. Raymond Hitchcock entertains in Armenian cafes. The Roy Howards have a Japanese favorite in 57th street. Floyd Gibbons likes owl wagons for midnight snacks. Joe Cook, Chili Villa.

Leon Gordon tosses parties at the Italian Del Pezzio up a rickety stair. The William Gaxtons are regulars at a Spanish spot in Sheridan Square. The Isaac Marcosses prefer a German kitchen in Yorkville. John Boetticher, the President's son-in-law, frequents a three-table place in rear of a French delicatessen.

A bleak desolation stagnates 5th avenue after 8 in the evening. Aside from the occasional night watch or chance straggler it is lifeless. For years it was the 8 to 11 promenade, a paradise for window shoppers. Today some stores do not light their windows, so scant is the parade. And the breathless architectural grandeur of Radio City has saved the avenue by day. It was slowly sinking when the Rockefellers threw the life-line.

Karl Harriman, so long an editor of magazines, has in retirement finally found opportunity to satisfy an ambition that tagged his heels since youth. He is directing plays and acting in them in one of the red barn enterprises in Vermont. It was Harriman who gave Eddie Guest his first rhyming book and started him on his way. Now, strangely enough, in maturity they look like twins.

A full stop in Manhattan skyscrapers seems at hand. On the site of the old New York theater, one of Broadway's choicest corners, rises a two-count 'em two-story building. On the old Hammerstein theater site a modest structure goes up. Six years ago such sites would have out-empired the Empire State building itself. Not many buildings under construction are more than four stories, mostly two. This type, when finished, is quickly filled. Taxes are lower, and rents, too. Many believe there will not be another 30 story building this decade. Or the next.

Rupert Hughes's oration at the bier of his long-time friend, Ray Long, is reputed to have been one of the most masterly talks he ever delivered in a career of distinguished oratory. He was talking to a group of 20 sorrowful writers who had felt the touch of genius Long displayed in guiding the works of authors. It was an eulogy that wrung the hearts of men skilled in the portrayal of emotion in others, briefly beautiful. Long's ashes are to be scattered over Bohemian Grove in California, where he relaxed every summer.

The biggest serial circulation booster ever written was turned out by Robert W. Chambers for Cosmopolitan 20 years ago. One month after the first installment the circulation shot up a million and maintained it until the finish of the tale and much of the increase was held. So avid was the public for this serialization that newsstand dealers held back large numbers of their supply and bootlegged them to enthusiasts for $1 a copy. The novel was "The Common Law."

Nellie Revell says it is a small town, when you go to the telephone and ask for Jones' store and the operator replies: "It's took out." Miss Revell, incidentally, as one of the world's famous invalids, continues to inspire those beating back from despair. Beaten for innumerable years, during which she made her living, she is now able to be about although not fully recovered. Yet she manages to appear for her regular broadcasts and write her radio column for Variety. She lives at the Somerset in the heart of Broadway, where she was so long the only woman press agent.

Dick Berlin tells of the old ship captain dining at one of the restaurants off West street. After the chicken soup he asked what it was. He was told, "I've been sailing on it for forty years," he said, "and never knew it before."

Uniontown and Ashland The original Uniontown in Ohio is now the little county seat city of Ashland. It was laid out in 1815 by William Montgomery, the change to the present name was made some years later in honor of Henry Clay whose estate in Kentucky bore the name of Ashland. Thirty years after Uniontown was laid out, Ashland county was formed.

It is set down in the legends of the city that when the first grand jury in the county was impaneled it included a man who was a member of the first grand jury to sit in the state — at Marietta. But there must have been a mistake here, as the man would have been at least 79 years old—an advanced age for an emigrant.

Keep Your Nerves In Check Do not allow yourself to become upset over trifles.

It takes very little to cause you to reach a highly excited and nervous state that lasts for hours.

It may be that you have some insidious ailment that is manifesting itself through disease-ridden nerves.

But it is more likely that you lack self-control.

When you let inconsequential matters cause you to rave and rant, there must be some good reason.

Often you find yourself tired and worn at the end of a day.

Nerves on edge, you are cross and irritable.

Your intense engrossment in certain lines of work is wearing you out.

When you seek relief, you fail to relax—you have no rest.

You wonder at times how long you shall be able to go ahead with so little time off. Others do it and still can keep calm under all conditions.

Behind the News IN WASHINGTON AND WALL STREET

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, July 30.—A conspiracy of nature appears to be fooling the economists. They thought this was going to be an encouraging summer. Their only hope has been for fall.

But it seems that every time their pessimism is about to be realized, something uncharitable and unexpected arises to offset their dreary calculations.

You can get the best idea about it if you will look behind what has happened lately in steel. Three weeks ago everyone was expecting a sharp slump. During the July 4 holiday week ingot operations were down to one-third of capacity. Nothing encouraging was in sight. Then, without advance notice, operations began to pick up until the rate got up to 45 percent, and remained there. (It was only 40 percent in June.)

The only explanation of this phenomenon was that fabricators underestimated their demand. They have been working very close to their margin on stock. Unexpected orders started them to work unseasonably.

The orders came from automobile makers, residential construction, machine tools, all somewhat unexpected.

Solution

The riddle may not be as hard to solve as economists believe. The fact is that the depression influence has been removed from the business mind. In its place has come an alert conservatism, a tendency to underestimate expectations, to keep stocks of goods to a narrow margin, an eagerness to go after business actively at first sign of demand. Instead of remaining frozen in fearful restraint.

Chart

The figures on industrial production for the last four months show that this major index of activity has precisely followed normal seasonal fluctuations on a plane about 85 percent of normal (1923-25). April, June and July were exactly 86 and May 85.

You can get the long trend from the following chart of government figures. Each figure represents the percentage of normal at the times stated. All figures except prices are based on 1923-25 averages at 100; prices are based on 1926.

Production

Auto are now getting near the end of their run, but they have been holding up well. All figures from Detroit show activity and optimism in preparation for the start of new production in August. One notable factor is that this is the biggest year for trucks since 1929, indicating again that business itself is a buyer.

A steel trade publication recently carried a line that Henry Ford has sent out an inquiry for 50,000 to 140,000 tons of steel, the largest such inquiry in several years. (Incidentally, Ford will exceed his promise of a million cars this year.)

There is not much less to brag about in production. Textiles are mixed; tobacco strong; machinery strong.

NRA

The 7 percent drop in payrolls since May and a 4 percent decrease

In employment may be blamed partly, but certainly not entirely, on the breakup of the NRA codes.

In fact, some government economists doubt whether the codes had anything to do with it. They base their conclusion largely on the fact that figures on hourly rates of wages have shown no such decrease.

Also the figures on production are not collected from the same industries as the figures on employment and pay rolls, which may account for some discrepancy.

In general the government authorities believe the larger industries have lived up to their promise to maintain code standards.

Incidentally, there is no indication that prices have been affected by breakdown of the codes. In fact, a slight increase has been noticed in the prices of finished products.

Residences

The better building contract figures are due to accelerated residential building, which is about double what it was a year ago. All privately financed residential work has expanded. There is very little PWA in the figures. All sections of the country show this encouraging increase.

By JAMES McMULLIN

NEW YORK, July 30.—The future about allowing Ben Cohen and Dozier Devane to sit in at an executive session of house and senate conferees on the holding company bill had a couple of angles that escaped general attention.

Congressman George Huddleston's vehement objections were to be expected when you consider the Adamant record. He has been consistently sympathetic to the utilities and from their slant. All admission of Cohen and Devane to the meeting would have been like allowing one of two prize fighters to bring his seconds into the ring with him. The power people have been hopeful that conferees who favored their cause, even though lacking in real knowledge of the merits of the case, could after proper coaching, outargue proponents of the bill, equally uninformed on fundamentals, and force them to back down. Apparently the administration also figured this might happen and was therefore anxious to have a couple of experts handy to keep the measure's supporters in conference on the track. Hereafter there have been no objections to presence of White House advisers at committee meetings.

But this time New Yorkers are convinced the White House forces pulled a boner. They say that with all the excitement about lobbying in the air whoever was responsible for Cohen's presence should have realized there was certain to be a resounding yawn from Huddleston and Cooper. Utility leaders are delighted to remark that the administration has lifted the curse off the lobbying inquiry more effectively than they could have done in a month of Sundays. For the first time they are definitely optimistic that the whole bill will be wrecked in conference and never reported out.

Decisive

Financial experts say there were signs last week that our treasury has again bailed a foreign nation out of hot water. Holland this time. During the crisis one New York bank was buying guilders with a free-handed confidence which indicated it was purchasing for government account, not for its own. Admittedly this isn't proof, but at least it's strong circumstantial evidence.

If the premise is correct the treasury has learned subtlety. There was no telltale increase of foreign bank deposits with the federal reserve. Nor is it likely that Secretary Morgenthau and the Dutch government will exchange bows in public. Gov. Jean Tannery of the Bank of France undoubtedly appreciated Mr. Morgenthau's aid, but the gesture didn't exactly move the American congress and public to enthusiastic cheers.

The balance of political power which the Catholic party now holds in Holland makes it look bad for the gold standard. The party is strongly opposed to further deflation and inclined to favor devaluation as an alternative remedy. Its influence may be decisive.

Charity trustees are genuinely crushed by Roosevelt's insistence that donations by corporations shall not be tax exempt. They figure the ensuing loss of about $20,000,000 a year sounds a death knell for private charities. They will continue to protest but are all too well aware that they have no political influence.

What they really want to know is what the heck the President calls the spending of relief money if not the purchase of political good will. And if it's reprehensible to spend a stockholder's money for charity without his consent what about letting the taxpayer select his beneficiaries too? The argument may not be cogent, but try to persuade them that it isn't.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Sir: Many of our citizens on three different occasions petitioned authorities for the lawful right to a vote on the question of a municipal electric plant here, and in each instance they were opposed by our city officials and every technicality necessary was used by the public utility to frustrate the people's efforts.

It was proven beyond a reasonable doubt that the initiative and referendum is a hoax from several points of view. It is also evident that the municipal electric question will not come to the vote requested, until we have a majority in city council that favors it.

Last Thursday you published an article, headed "C. of C. Scores Plan For City Power System", and a resolution adopted by the directors of the Chamber of Commerce which stated its reasons for being opposed to a municipal electric system and heartily commended the four councilmen for voting against a proposal to spend $1,500,000 for something we already have.

To one who has for years been interested in the welfare of our city and has worked for the acquiring of a municipally-owned electric system, the reasons for opposition, stated in the resolution, seem somewhat awry.

In the first place, I have never heard or read of a chamber of commerce that favored municipal ownership of anything in which there was a profit for the people at large.

In the second place, our Chamber of Commerce represents a very small fraction of the number of folks who are in business in our city, who were and I have no reason to doubt, still are, in favor of a vote of the people on this proposition.

In the third place, the opinion generally expressed in the resolution, inferring that a million and a half dollar bond issue for a municipal electric system would add to our city's inability to meet its legitimate debts, is directly opposite to our opinion. We believe that a municipal electric plant would help much to pay off our city's debts, and that it is the only feasible way in sight at present to get revenue for this purpose without raising taxes.

In the fourth place, these are only opinions, and we all have a right to express them. Fifth, vital issues to our city should be given a 100 percent square deal, in that all sides of such questions should be published to enlighten the public in general and thus enable more fair consideration. Then leave the decision to a vote of the people. This is true democracy.

In conclusion, I wish to state that the only thing referred to in the resolution on which we can agree, is that we want to pay our honest debts.

Italy's Gold in London

A FINANCIAL expert says "Japan and Italy will both have difficulties finding gold" to carry through the Ethiopian war complications.

How does the gentleman think Napoleon managed to carry on his wars, when he went to Italy, representing the Revolution, beating Italy and Austria with ease, then taking over the Revolution, beating almost the whole of Europe. He took charge of France after inflation had made the Assignat currency almost as cheap as waste paper. War, competently managed, makes gold unnecessary.

Italy has one hundred million dollars in gold stored in London and can't get it. Why cannot Italy get that gold? England says to Italy, "When you pay the money you borrowed in the war, you can have your gold."

SCOTLAND FULL OF BEAUTY AND ROMANTICISM

Nation Veritable Treasure House of Historic and Literary Associations
EDINBURGH CHARMING
One of World's Finest and Grandest Resorts Located at Gleneagles

By TEMPLE MANNING

IT IS a pity that so many visitors to England forget that a slight detour will bring them to Scotland, one of the most romantic countries in the world, and a veritable treasure house of historic and literary associations.

Edinburgh, one of the most beautiful of all cities, has much to offer. It is an age-long pageant of history. Princess street is one of the most unique and lovely highways in Europe, but lesser streets have an interest, too. George street has memories of Robert Burns. Thomas Carlyle and Robert Louis Stevenson. Scott also lived there for a while, as well as on Castle street.

Historic Thoroughfare
The author of the Waverley novels was born in a wee house in an alley in the old town where there are some quaint houses, built close and high. In its main thoroughfare, the Royal Mile, history was made and lived. The queen of Scots rode down it many a time to her palace at Holyrood, and so did criminals and martyrs, to die for their faith or for their sins.

Walter Scott dominates the country southeast of Edinburgh, while to the southwest is the land of Bobbie Burns. To the north lie the Highlands and their hero, Prince Charlie. But the modern is by no means neglected. Everywhere there are golf courses, and one of the world's finest and grandest resorts is at Gleneagles.

Twelfth Century Scottish Bridge.

But let's get off to the Jacobite country, where at Loch Shiel a monument shows where Prince Charlie's standard was raised. Past the Misty Isle is where the Stuart pretender escaped and hid in caves, which not even a tremendous monetary reward could tempt his faithful followers to betray.

Beauty and Glamour
Inverness is a Highland town full of beauty and glamour. Beyond it is Culloden field where was sounded the death-knell of Jacobite hopes. There's another moor near Culloden, the "blasted heath" of Macbeth, which lies between Nairn and Forres. At the latter town, where Duncan heard of Macbeth's victory, a stone marks the ancient burning place of Forres witches.

Nearby is Fife, the scene of the Norwegian foray and of the massacre of Macduff's household. Duncan was buried at Iona where Christianity was first preached in Scotland and where three-score of Scots and Irish kings are reputed to rest. Macbeth was crowned at Scone, on a slab, since removed by Edward I and now under the coronation chair in Westminster Abbey.

"Does any one want to come along with me?" Willy Nilly asked, as he got out his automobile. Two ways the first thing in the morning. It seemed almost beyond belief that Willy Nilly was actually about to do something for his sticking-out, pointed ears.

"I'm sure you've had enough traveling for a while," Willy Nilly smiled affectionately at his dog, Rip.

"Yes, I think I have!" agreed Rip. "I'm not anxious to get away any distance from Puddle Muddle."

"You'd probably find me of little use," bleated Sweet Face, the lamb.

"That lamb," thought Christopher, "knows how to be lazy with out any one except myself realizing it."

"We'd be too heavy if we all got into the car," growled Jelly Bear.

"Besides," agreed Top Notch, the rooster, in his practical fashion, "people who saw us might think we were a small-sized show or circus and would stop us to do tricks."

"That's true," growled Honey Bear. "Perhaps Willy Nilly would do better, really and truly, if none of us went. We might only be in the way."

"I'd like to go," quacked Mrs. Quacko Duck, thinking what fun it would be to go and see Mrs. Quacko later on and tell her that she had traveled over the countryside in Willy Nilly's car, and had called on a magician.

"All right, waddle in," said Willy Nilly, opening the door to admit her. She got in the front seat before Willy Nilly could get in.

side Willy Nilly and Christopher Columbus got in the back seat to direct the way. They started off.

Daily Horoscope BY GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Wednesday, July 31

A rather quiet and routine day is forecast from the prevailing astral influences. It would be as well to refrain from any speculative or new ventures, as there is a rather discouraging sign portending loss or peril in finances. There may be a peculiar, weird or intriguing situation to contend with, mainly by tact and subtle insight. Shun extravagance and unwise personal indulgences. It is probable that social, domestic, or romantic attachments may be found lively.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a rather routine year, with little in the way of new plans, projects or investments encouraged. In fact, speculative enterprises and extravagance should be avoided. A singular, intriguing or curious state of affairs may arise to be handled with sarcasm and tact. Social, domestic and romantic interests claim the uppermost attention during the year.

A child born on this day may be prone to devote itself to the pursuit of pleasure, with leaning toward the domestic, romantic or social, rather than the business interests. It may tend to extravagance and personal indulgences, be fond of show and the limelight.

Rich Vitamin C Diet Advised To Prevent Scurvy

Physician Says Nutritional Disease Often Overlooked In Young Children

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Scurvy is what the doctors call a nutritional disease. The tissues and functions of the body are disturbed because of wrong eating or wrong things to eat. This particular trouble is caused by a lack of vitamin C in the diet.

In olden times, when little of scientific value was known about food and nutrition, this disease was a familiar one. It was a common ailment of sailors. On their long sea voyages these men were deprived of fresh fruits and vegetables over a considerable period of time. In consequence, scurvy often resulted.

This danger has been overcome by refrigeration and the perfection of the canning industry. Fresh foods and a variety of dishes provide the vitamins, minerals and other elements essential to health.

Old Scurvy Unknown

Old-fashioned scurvy is practically unknown today. But many persons, children particularly, have symptoms of "hidden scurvy." They are listless, even lazy, and fail to develop normally.

A diet in vitamin C will prevent scurvy in all its forms. Such a diet promotes health in general. Among the sources of this vitamin are raw fruits or fruit juices, lemons, limes and grapefruit. Raw or quickly sterilized milk obtained from cows fed on green pasturage will supply it. The vitamin is very sensitive to heat; considerable of its value is destroyed by cooking. Vitamin C not only prevents general decay, but it aids in the development of sound teeth. For this reason, there should be selected for the diet of young and growing children foods rich in this essential element.

With the discovery of vitamins our knowledge of what to do for nutritional diseases has increased. By proper food selections, many of those disorders which are due to wrong diets may be prevented. But if the diet is lacking in certain of the vitamins such nutritional diseases as scurvy, beriberi and rickets occur.

Symptoms of Disease

A deficiency of vitamin C continued for a long time will cause failure in appetite, loss of weight and may even result in scurvy. The disease makes itself known by swollen skin, swollen gums and sensitive and loose teeth. The sufferer tires quickly, complains of shortness of breath, and has no desire for the least exertion. Pains in the limbs and joints, commonly mistaken for rheumatism, may be other symptoms.

In infants the disease is sometimes overlooked or is mistaken for some constitutional ailment. This is not surprising because the youngster shows definite signs of undernourishment and fails to develop as it should.

The Sunlit Road

BY TOM T. JONES

Though they have resided in East Liverpool for many years and were each prominent in their individual business activities it was a remote spot in Canada that three local men met by strange coincidence during a fishing trip during the early part of July.

The three men were Samuel Bell and N. B. McKinnon of East End and Earl A. Tweed of West Third street. During the latter part of their vacation Mr. and Mrs. Tweed, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Fowler and their two sons, visited a fishing camp near Knowlton, Ontario, and while there met Mr. Bell and Mr. McKinnon, both of whom were strangers. On this same trip Mr. Tweed and others with him also met Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Faulk and their young son of Steubenville. Wayne Faulk is a former resident of East Liverpool being a son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Faulk of Dresden avenue. They also encountered Dr. A. L. Turner and his family also of East Liverpool and learned that Dr. Turner had on the preceding day visited Dr. A. R. DeFoe, famed Canadian physician in charge of the health of the famed Dionne quintuplets at Collander, Ont.

Before returning home Mr. and Mrs. Tweed visited the birthplace of the quintuplets. The visiting hours were 11 a. m. and 1 and 5 p. m. There can be no interruptions in the afternoon nap of the famous sisters. They learned that Marie is the favorite baby of Dr. DeFoe. She has been the most delicate of the five and he, no doubt, has taken unusual interest in her. Cecile, is inclined to be brave and circumspect. Emeline is the least imperious of them all; she is the last of the five to demand with emphasis her dinner. Annette is the second in size of the five while Yvonne is the heartiest and the strongest of all.

One of the pictures which the local visitors brought back with them is a view of the babies seated, each having a doll that has been made as its individual counterpart. The result is to suggest the presence of 10 babies.

'HAPPY FAMILY' DRAWS PLANS FOR FUTURE

COMING ATTRACTIONS IN THE THEATERS

STATE

The super-ego of a great baseball player who admits he is the answer to a team's and a maiden's prayer provides the theme of "Swell-Head" which opens at the State theater Wednesday. The bill also includes "Air Hawks" with Ralph Bellamy, Wiley Post and Tala Birell.

In "Swell-Head," Terry McCall, home-run king, is in love with Mary Malone, who is cashier in a restaurant frequented by members of the team. Terry can't understand why Mary even looks at another man when she can have him; but the girl not only looks at Rube, a teammate of Terry's, she occasionally allows him to take her out.

A quarrel ensues between the two suitors, leading to a fist fight that sends Rube to the owner of the club asking for a transfer to another team. The trade is effected; Rube, one of the league's leading pitchers, going to the team that is pressing Terry's for the pennant.

About this time, Mary admits to Terry that she loves him, but adds that she will not marry him unless he turns from his boastful ways. Terry promises, but cannot seem to change.

When Terry's team plays Rube's a few weeks later, Terry kids the pitcher when he gets up to bat. When Terry turns to argue with the umpire Rube tries to slip a strike past him, but the ball accidentally goes wild and Terry is hoisted with it. A severe brain concussion is caused, and the home-run hitter begins to lose his eyesight.

With drama, comedy and romance proportionately blended, the story goes on to a surprise climax that brings Terry and Mary happily together at the final fade-out.

The ever-popular Wallace Ford is seen as Terry McCall, the swell-headed ball player.

Barbara Kent, who enacts the role of Mary Malone, is the very lovely girl who has become one of Hollywood's most sought-after actresses. She has a score of fine films to her credit.

THIS IS SERIOUS OCCUPATION—Two-year-old Elizabeth La Bousse, Charlotte, N. C., tot, is too much concerned with her business of filling a pail with sand on the beach at Atlantic City, N. J., to pay any attention to the roving cameraman.

CITY OF 4,000 WORKERS—Unusual picture shows Mason City, Wash., where 4,000 workers on the Grand Coulee dam live in electrically heated, chimneyless houses. More than 11,000,000 cubic yards of earth and rock must be cleared to make way for the dam, a gigantic structure to be built with PWA funds.

TELLS PURPORTED INSIDE STORY—Frank Speicher, New York dealer in inner tubes, is pictured disclosing before the house military affairs committee the purported "inside story" of a plan to split a $10,000,000 army motor car contract between two large auto manufacturers. He testified that back of the plan was Joseph Silverman, Jr., who once conducted a huge business in excess army supplies.

TELLS OF RESCUE ATTEMPT IN "AMERICAN TRAGEDY"—Miss Lucille Harrold, counselor at a camp at Lake Singletary, Massachusetts, and an expert swimmer, is pictured with Corporal Robert E. Thompson of the state police, in a boat pointing to the spot where the body of Mrs. Newell P. Sherman of Sutton, was recovered. Fog prevented rescue of the victim, who was allowed to drown by her husband, according to his confession to police, because he was infatuated with Miss Esther Magill.

GIRL HER HUBBY!—When a judge at Columbus, Kas., ruled that "a woman cannot marry a woman," the "honeymoon" of the two girls pictured above was cut short. "Hubby" Alice Hayes, left, went back to her home at Picher, Okla., angrily asserting there was no law forbidding her to wear men's clothes. The "bride", 14-year-old Margaret Fowler, right, was taken back to her home at Galena, Kas., by her mother.

The Fleet Wings, champions of the first half of the City softball league, are finding the road to the second-half title rocky, indeed. They were jarred by the Foutts Taverns last week, the Fleet Wings were blasted right out of first place last night when they suffered a 2-1 defeat at the hands of the Watson Hardware in one of the most thrilling games of the season. As a result, the Golden Star Dairies, though idle, moved into leadership.

In another game, Copenhaver Grocers lifted themselves into the .500 class with a 10-1 victory over the Heimie's Cigars.

The Fleet Wing-Watson game was a pitcher's battle between Fitch and Kapp and things went smoothly for the first-half champions for seven innings.

After three scoreless frames, the Fleet Wings had pushed across a run in the fourth and went into the eighth with that margin looking more impressive all the time.

But destruction broke loose in the eighth and the Watsons, rising to the occasion, pushed across two runs to sew up the decision. Kapp gave the Fleet Wings five hits while his mates collected only four off Fitch.

Scott led the attack for the losers with three hits, which also gave him batting honors for the game. The Copenhavers had no trouble at all against the Heimies. They rolled up a 4-0 lead in the first three innings, scored once each in the sixth and eighth and then pushed across four more in the ninth.

Crowe, on the mound for the Grocers, gave up only six hits while his mates pounded Gardner and Swift for 16, including five by F. Hilditch and four by N. Hilditch.

In games tonight, Parsons Coals will meet McHenry Grocers at Parsons field and Golden Star Dairies will battle Foutts Taverns at Patterson field. The summaries:

The Madison Square Garden folks have decided to give up the ghost of their elephant in the Florida winter resort, which cost close to $150,000 to build and many additional thousands to maintain, is being dismantled.

Perhaps the effective work done by the little woodworms in their efforts to take the structure off the hands of the fight promoters had something to do with the decision. More than likely Col. John Reed Kilpatrick and his colleagues have finally come to the conclusion that Miami is not a good city for big fights.

Certainly, no one can accuse them of not having given the arena a fair chance. They took it on the chin in their every attempt to stage a major attraction. Maybe their offerings were not attractions of major caliber but they were the best available at the time.

The Garden was expected to build a new stadium after the Sharkey-Striling bout attracted a gate of $425,000 at Miami Beach. They based their judgment on that one fight. They neglected to take into consideration the unusual circumstances surrounding that affair which had much to do with its reaping such a financial harvest.

Why That One Drew
First of all there was the tremendous popularity of Young Striling in the south. Jack Dempsey stepped into the picture when an unexcused absence of Tex Rickard and out of the promoter's chair. If all helped to build up the gate for that success.

But the crowds did not flock to the Sharkey-Scott bout. That flaccid drew less than a $200,000 gate. Carnera and Maloney drew more where in the neighborhood of $50,000 while the Carnera-Loughran fight for the heavyweight championship proved the biggest failure of all when it attracted even less than that figure.

Nothing in these figures to indicate that at some future date the stadium might pay for itself.

The Garden isn't likely to attempt staging another big fight show in Miami—not for a while at least. If the south should develop another boy with a following that would come close to Striling's, they might change their minds. In the meantime the task of dismantling the big arena—that is, the part of it that has not already been destroyed by the termites—will go on.

Two Years For Buddy
At the tender age of 20 Buddy Baer, the younger but bigger brother of Max, is allowing himself just two years more to carve out his niche in boxing's hall of fame. If it can't be done in that time it never will be done.

At least in those two years Buddy hopes to acquire a bank account of sufficient proportions to enable him to leave the ring fairly fixed and settle down on the ranch he is buying from Ancil Hoffman, manager of the Baer brothers.

Even in the limited time allotted himself the younger Baer may go far, for he is well equipped for service in the ring. Almost as tall as Carnera, he has whittled his weight down to the point where the 240 pounds he carries is an asset, not a liability. A fair boxer with a neat left jab, he boasts a fair turn of speed. Above all he packs a terrific punch.

While Buddy hopes to follow in his older brother's footsteps as far as gaining the world's title is concerned, his campaign is mapped out along lines in direct contrast to his brother's play-boy methods.

YAROSZ RETURNS TO RING TONIGHT IN STEUBENVILLE

Large Local Delegation Will See Champ in First Battle Since Injury

A large delegation of East Liverpool fight fans will be on hand at Harding stadium in Steubenville tonight at 8:30 to see Teddy Yarosz, middleweight champion, return to the squared circle after a seven-month layoff because of a knee injury.

The pride of Monaca, Pa., will meet Freddie Salius, 170-pounder from Syracuse, N. Y., in the 10-round main bout, which will be the first in a series of tuneups for the champion before he places his crown on the block in a Pittsburgh fight, probably this fall.

Salius arrived in Steubenville Sunday and has worked out twice in a gymnasium there. He appears to be in fine shape for tonight's battle, although the dopesters are giving him very little chance to make a close fight of it.

Yaros has been working out at his home in Monaca for several weeks, boxing in the gymnasium and doing considerable roadwork. Last week he had a public workout in Pittsburgh and has convinced his manager, newspaper men and a host of ardent admirers that he is back in championship form.

He will be spotting Salius about 10 pounds in tonight's conflict, but is expected to offset that handicap with the great speed and uncanny cleverness that are his.

The semi-final will be a "natural" for Steubenville fans, for it brings together Dominick Mancini of Pittsburgh and Jackie Holt of Canton, both boys tipping the scales around 142. Mancini and Holt have both fought there, though never against each other, and are popular with the fans. The card will be rounded out with a six-round and three four-round bouts.

Lake Placencia stepped back into a deadlock for first place in the county baseball league last night by defeating Salineville 6-3 in a postponed game at Placencia.

The victory, fifth in seven starts in the last-half race, throws Placencia into a four-way tie with Homer Laughlins, Lisbon and East Palestine.

A three-run rally in the seventh proved to be the deciding factor in the game, which was nip-and-tuck for six innings. Salineville jumped away to a two-run lead in the first half of the opening inning, but Placencia came back with three in the last half. The visitors tied it up in the third but were blanked the rest of the way.

The four-way tie for the pinnacle will be broken up again Wednesday when two of the joint leaders, Homer Laughlins and Lake Placencia, meet here.

Lisbon will play host to Salem and East Palestine will go to Sebring in other games involving first division occupants. A fourth battle will pit Kensington against Salineville on the latter's field.

READY MADE WIFE

BY CORALIE STANTON

SYNOPSIS: Laurie Moore suddenly has discovered that she must marry her former employer, Mark Albery, to save the career of Rex Moore, the man she loves. So far as the public knows, she and Rex are married. Albery knows they are not, however, and declares he will be able to arrange a "divorce" soon, and will insist that Laurie marry him at the earliest possible time.

Chapter 36 GLADYS AGAIN

Laurie shivered with sad memory when Albery used the same phrase as Rex Moore had done. She felt like something of no importance, tossed from one hand to another. Fool-proof story to get rid of her; fool-proof story to get her. She had sold herself into bondage, and she was terrified.

"And, of course, at present, you must stay on at the office, for the sake of appearances. We can keep in touch that way. Moore will get off on his flight as soon as possible. And then we can plan our little summer holiday, you and I."

His smile, so outwardly charming, lighting his impassive face into virile life, made her tremble.

"Then, that's all fixed up, dear little girl!" he said. "And now I must get off. I've got a business banquet tonight, worse luck!"

He took her in his arms. She went icy cold under his passionate kisses. A tragic figure, a shrinking victim of the man she loathed, but to whom she had given the right of possession, because she could not help herself.

Laurie had been spending Sunday with her newly-married girl friend from the office out in the suburb where she lived, almost on the fringe of the country.

The tube train took her back to Piccadilly Circus, and she started out to walk back to Westminster by the pleasant route of St. James's Park. It was such a lovely mellow night.

There was nothing to go back for. Gladys was not at home. The troupe had gone to the outlying Surrey towns for three weeks, too far for her to come home every night.

Mark Albery was in Paris over the week end, much to Laurie's relief. He had wanted her to go with him. There had been a scene, but she had made a firm stand. It was amazing, even to herself, what power she had over him.

Around Piccadilly Circus was a stream of traffic unusual on a Sunday night. But everybody who could had spent the day in the country. As she was about to cross the Circus, Laurie was held up as the traffic was let through.

A taxi came along and slowed down for a few moments. Its occupants caught Laurie's eye. A young man in evening dress sat on the side nearest her. She remembered. Of course, it was Lord Dagenbury's son, young Dallas, whom she and Gladys had met at Pen Grettton. She had taken a dislike to him, and when Albery had told her of him had not made her change her mind.

Suddenly he moved, and a girl's head appeared beside him, leaning forward. Laurie's heart gave a loud knock. Gladys' lovely little head, bare, the dim light on her glorious dark golden curls. Gladys, dimpling and smiling, in evening dress, an exquisite bunch of orchids on her shoulder, from which the light wrap had fallen.

He bent towards her. The taxi moved on, shot away, leaving Laurie rooted to the spot.

Glad—and young Dallas! What was she doing with him at this time of night in a taxi, when she was staying in lodgings at Guildford? It was past ten o'clock now. She must have come from Guildford, dressed for the evening, and be going back there.

Oh, if only Glad would confide in her! Laurie tried to reason with herself, as she walked on. After all, there was nothing out of the way in going out to supper on a Sunday night with a young man. But Glad had not said she had met young Dallas again.

And there was the fear that was always subconsciously gnawing at her heart. If anything should happen to Glad!

She had a vision of the young man's blunt, blurred face; his eyes, as she remembered them, green and frivolous; his hat ears standing out. It would not let her sleep.

The next morning she had a telegram from Albery from Paris. He would not be back until the evening. He would call and take her out to dinner.

She decided to go to Guildford. She could not rest until she had seen Glad.

When she arrived at the girl's lodging, she was told her sister was at the theater for a rehearsal.

So that was true, at any rate. It was a slight relief. Laurie could not bring herself to question the landlady about when Glad had come home last night. She walked to the theater.

The stage was set for rehearsal, when she reached the theater, and the auditorium was in darkness. As Laurie groped her way, the manager met her, and recognized her, telling her that her sister was about to rehearse a solo dance.

They had engaged a special dancer, but she had fallen ill, and manager expressed great satisfaction with the girl's performance, and installed Laurie in a seat to watch.

Laurie was frankly enchanted. Gladys was wonderful. She was ethereal, distant, alluring, and just touched with a haunting madness in the final bars.

The manager came back to Laurie's side after directing a few alterations in the dance.

"This is only the second rehearsal, Mrs. Moore," he said proudly. "Do you know, I think your little sister has a touch of genius? What Gladys really needs is a year or two of hard study and practice, both at home and on the Continent."

"She would make a big name," he said. "She shall if she wants to, when I am married to Mark Albery," said Laurie to herself, with quiet bitterness.

"Why, Laurie, old girl!" cried Gladys on seeing her sister. She sounded rather extravagantly pleased. "What on earth are you doing here? Come to see me rehearse—specially? What's the office doing without you?"

"I want to talk to you, Glad. Come and have lunch in some place in the town."

"Thanks much! I can do with something tastier than Ma gives us at the digs," the girl said, still with a touch of ostentatious gaiety. "But what's up, really?" she went on, as they walked away from the theater.

"Glad, I saw you last night in a taxi—with that young Dallas," said Laurie abruptly, awkwardly, speaking as if she was ashamed of herself.

"Me!" exclaimed the younger girl. "You saw me with whom?" She turned eyes wide with amazement on her embarrassed sister.

"With that young Mr. Dallas we met at Pen Grettton, Lord Dagenbury's son."

"Where—may I ask?"

"In Piccadilly Circus."

"Did you say—in a taxi?"

"Yes, I was coming back from Nora's place. The traffic was stopped, and your taxi pulled up just in front of me. It was about ten o'clock. Oh, Glad, don't deny it!"

"Not guilty!" said Gladys coolly. "Did you have some drinks at Nora's?"

"Glad, don't play with me; it was you—you know it was."

"But it just wasn't, old girl. I'm sorry, I must have a double."

"Glad!" Laurie's poignant voice fell on deaf ears. Do you mean to tell me you were not with Mr. Dallas last night—that you've never met him since that time at Pen Grettton?"

"That's exactly what I do mean," Gladys replied.

"Glad!" said Laurie again, utterly discouraged, as her sister turned that drooping, sullen look on her. "But I could have sworn it was you."

"You must go about looking in every cab, I should think!" Gladys replied belligerently. "For goodness' sake Laurie, when will it dawn on you that I'm not a baby and can look after myself? It wasn't me you saw, and that's that."

They ate a nice meal without paying any attention to it, both busy with their thoughts.

When they were out in the street again, Laurie said quietly:

"I must have made a mistake, Glad. But I'm glad I came. Your dance is lovely. You're going to do big things."

"I hope so, Laurie, I love it. I just want to practice, practice all the time." This was genuine enthusiasm, and all the way to her lodgings Gladys talked of her work.

Her chum, who was rooming with her, was in the little sitting room, having just finished her meal.

"Nelly," said Gladys loudly, and with a ringing laugh, "please put my sister right! Where was I last night at ten o'clock, dear?"

"Why, here, Glad!" answered the obedient Nelly.

C. OF C. OFFERS ART EXHIBIT IN SCULPTURE HERE

Miss Helen V. Bailey's Work In Pottery, Porcelain and Bronze Presented

12 STUDIES DISPLAYED

Sculptor is Now in Charge Of FERA Classes in Old Hall China Office

Twelve artistic figures, sculptured by Miss Helen V. Bailey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Bailey of 1219 St. Clair avenue, a graduate of the University of Michigan, are shown in the Chamber of Commerce's 46th exhibit which opened Monday and will continue throughout the week in the lobby of the Carnegie public library.

Portraits in porcelain and pieces in plaster and bronze, as well as photographs of other works of art by Miss Bailey, who has been acclaimed by critics for her interpretative and creative skill, compose the display.

Portraits in Porcelain Shown

Outstanding in the exhibit are two portraits in white porcelain of Mary Frances and Sally Cawood, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Cawood of Park boulevard. The portrait of Mary Frances was shown in the 130th exhibit of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts.

A commanding figure in plaster is "St. Francis," 13 inches high. A reproduction in bronze is owned by Leland Thompson. Miss Bailey also did a garden figure of "Pan" for Mr. Thompson.

Two Chinese mythological figures, finished in green plaster, are shown. "A Russian Dancer," of similar handiwork, is striking in its action pose.

Other figures include "Puck," from Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream;" a fountain composition in the nude, and a bust, "Sleeping Babe." Two miniature elephants in white porcelain are also shown.

A cast of a bronze medal, with a prize winning design, is exhibited. The piece was made by the sculptress at Ann Arbor, reproductions of which are awarded winners in the annual North American Flower exhibit held annually at Detroit, Mich.

A life-size figure of Peter Pan, done by Miss Bailey is in the Michigan Artists' League garden at Ann Arbor. She assisted in sculpturing a group for the Hall of Religion at the World's fair in Chicago, and has just completed a bust of Dr. Margaret Bell of the health service department of the University of Michigan.

Critics Praise Work

Her work has been praised in articles in the American Magazine of Art and various publications at Ann Arbor, Detroit, Cleveland and other cities.

Miss Bailey, who received her master's degree after five and a half years under Professor Avard Fairbanks in the Michigan art school, has resumed the instruction of a federal emergency relief class in sculpturing at the former Hall China Co. office in Walnut street.

Twelve pupils have filed applications for the class sessions on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday mornings. Miss Bailey taught 30 pupils last fall, prior to returning to Ann Arbor for post-graduate work.
